Moses Simpson came across the mountains from VA , settled in Kentucky and married Permelia Emily Watt in 1818 in pendleton Co KY At this time Kentucky was almost an unbroken forest. As not much land had been cleared and game was abundant at that time, he must have been a hunter. He bought land in the lower edge of Harrison Co.,(Antioch) but did not do very extensive farming. It is believed he sold timber. There were no roads and trains did not come through Harrison Co until 1854.

Emily Permelia Wyatt and Moses Simpson had the following children:

Less than six months later came the massacre of the settlers by the Indians, "but Jamestown having been warned in time, the Governor, his entourage and settlers there escaped the holocaust". Barbara Mitford, his first wife, did not accompany her husband to VA for neither she nor her children are listed with him in the census there of 1623. Upon his return to England in 1626 with his brother, Sir Francis, called there by the death of their father, which occurred in 1624, Haute Wyatt settled again in Boxley, where his wife gave birth to a third child, Oct 1626 and died shortly afterwards. He married again in 1629, Anna (daughter of John Cox of Kent) who gave birth to two children before her death in Feb. 1631. In 1632 the Rev. Haute Wyatt succeeded to the charge of Boxley Parish and became vicar. He lived there with his aged mother, Lady Jane Wyatt, until his death in 1638. As he left no will, his mother appeared in the Archdeaconry Court of Canterbury, October 26th 1638 and petitioned for the administration of his estate. 1152. George 'Sir' Wyatt, son of Thomas 'The Younger' Wyatt and Jane Haute, was born in 1550. He died in 1623. He married Jane Finch in 1568.

1153. Jane Finch.

Jane Finch and George 'Sir' Wyatt had the following children:

- i. Francis Wyatt was born in 1575. He died in 1644. He married Margaret Sandys.

Notes for Francis Wyatt:
Sir Francis Wyatt. 1575-1644

1603 Matriculated at St Mary's Hall, Oxford.

1604 Admitted to Grays' Inn

1618 Knighted by James I, married Margaret, sister of Sir Edwin Sandys, who was a member of the VA Company, London and organised the emigration of Dutch and English settlers to America. Founded town of Plymouth, Massachusetts.

1621-29 and 1639-42. Through this marriage connection, Sir Francis was nominated Governor of VA, an area which covered a large tract of eastern seaboard of America covering not only the present US State of VA but several of the other States as well, which afterwards received separate names.

During the first year of office 1300 settlers arrived in VA, but inflow was checked in 1622 due to Indians revolt, when 300 settlers were massacred. With the seat of government at Jamestown during his second term of office there developed a thriving community some seven miles away, between Jamestown on the James River and Yorktown on the York River. This was called "Middle Plantation" the name being changed to Williamsburg, when a college was built there and named in honour of William and Mary, 1693. (It now has over 5000 students). From records in the Land Office in Richmond, among the first residents of Middle Plantation were Edward Wyot (36) and George (35) in 1645. (York County Land Records)

NOTE

During his governorship, Sir Francis signed his name on land records in FIVE different ways:- from Wyot - Wiatt - Wyat - Wyet - to Wyatt.

Sir Francis Wyatt, in a letter to his father George Wyatt (21) dated 4 April 1623:-

"James City sayes, Mrs Boyse, reporteth a great deale of miserie that o' people endure and not least Hungerin wch th' Indians also suffer extreme. The Company agreed w'th Capt Each (Mr of th' Abigaile) for erecting of a Fort vpon the Oister bankes; but it pleased God to call him away, presently after his coming and I feare he vnderstood not the place where intent was to build it; forvpon triall it proved a loose false grounde, besides the Capt beeing dead there was not left that would certaine vndertake it or covenant to pforme it in any resonable tyme. So we resolved to dismiss the Ship (lying at 160 a month) and w'th o' land men (leaving every XXth man towarde the Worke) vnder the Com'd of Capt Roger Smyth who lived 12 or 13 years in the Wars in the Low Countreyes to build a blockhouse vpon the Shoare where we might well comand shipping and w'hall have a strong Plantacon the gound being rich and good; This will at least give a beginning to what may be done hereafter of greater consequence."

Sir Francis Wyatt, knighted by Charles I, had a daughter Elizabeth (/30) who married James Bosville. Their daughter Frances (32) carried the estate to her husband, Sir Thomas Selyard, but Edwin (30) younger brother of Henry, a distinguished lawyer, established his claim to a large portion of the estate against his niece, Lady Selyard, leaving her only the Abbey and land adjoining.

Governor of VA

1603 Knighted

1621 Arrived at Jamestown in October. Brought with him a new constitution for the Colony. This famous ordinance furnished the model of every subsequent form of Anglo-American government. During the first year 21 vessels bringing more than 1300 settlers arrived.

1622 Prosperity checked by Indian rising when over 300 settlers were massacred.

Wyatt's father died in Ireland in Sept 1625 and Wyatt left VA to succeed to his property at Boxley.

Buried in Boxley Church 1644, lived to 70, wife survived him by 40 years, 5 sons and one daughter.

576. ii. Haute Wyatt was born in 1594 in Boxley Manor, Kent, England. He died in 1638 in Boxley Manor, Kent, England. He married Anne Lee Cox. She died on 29 Feb 1632 in Boxley Manor, Kent, England. He married Barbara Elizabeth Mitford. She was born in 1598 in Newton Red House, Kent, England.
- iii. Eleanora Wyatt was born in 1624. She died in 1649. She married John Lord Finch.

Notes for Eleanora Wyatt:
Eleanora, 1624-1649

1623 "Eleanore uxor Joh' Finch". She married John, Lord Finch of Forditch, a relative of George's (21) mother. John Finch was a barrister. He became a Member of Parliament for Canterbury and Speaker of the House of Commons in 1628 and in 1640 was raised to the peerage as Lord Finch. He supported King Charles over "Shipmoney" tax and had to flee for his life to Holland. His marriage was an unhappy one. He was buried in St Martin's Church, Canterbury, aged 77, where there is an inscription on a cumbrous monument.

- iv. George Wyatt.

Notes for George Wyatt:
George Wyatt

Third son of Sir George (21) married and had issue. His grandson also named George, was chief clerk of the votes office of the House of Commons and married Hannah Wood.

This grandson had 3 sons, Samuel, Charles and George and three daughters. His youngest daughter Hannah, (born 1735) married William Vincent, Headmaster of Westminster School and Dean of Westminster Abbey, who died in 1815. Both were buried in Westminster Abbey.

1154. John Cox. He married Anne Lee.

1155. Anne Lee.

Anne Lee and John Cox had the following child:

577. i. Anne Lee Cox. She died on 29 Feb 1632 in Boxley Manor, Kent, England. She married Haute Wyatt. He was born in 1594 in Boxley Manor, Kent, England. He died in 1638 in Boxley Manor, Kent, England.

1216. Patrick Redd.

Patrick Redd had the following child:

608. i. William Redd was born on 02 Dec 1593 in Dysart, Kildare, Ireland. He married Jane Ireland. She was born in 1595.

2304. Thomas 'The Younger' Wyatt, son of Thomas 'The Poet' Wyatt and Elizabeth Brooke, was born in 1521 in Allington Castle, England. He died on 11 Apr 1554 in London, England. He married Jane Haute.

2305. Jane Haute, daughter of William Haute and Mary Guildford, was born in 1522.

Notes for Thomas 'The Younger' Wyatt:
Son of Sir Thomas the Elder Married at 16

1521 Born Allington Castle, was a devout Catholic all his life. His parents were already estranged, his father rarely at home, being either abroad on the King's business or at Court.

1536 At 15 appointed Esquire of the Body, to Henry VIII and Joint Constable of Conysborough Castle (Yorkshire) post previously held by father and grandfather.

1537 Barely 16 married Jane Haute, daughter and co-heiress of Sir William Haute of Bishopsbourne, Kent. She bore him 10 children, of whom 3 married and left issue. Of these, Anna, married Roger Twysden.

1538 Elizabeth Darral, became Thomas' mistress and bore him a son, Francis Darral Wyatt, in 1540.

1542 On death of his father succeeded to vast estates, titles and father's debts to the King, which he redeemed by sale of property for £3,700.

1543 Inherited his father's estates, which were heavily encumbered with debts, so that he was obliged to sell part of the estates to pay them. He then settled the estate of Tarrant, in Dorset on Francis Darrell. His portrait shows him age 32.

1543-50 Served as volunteer in wars against France and given command of troops. During this period Henry VIII died, succeeded by his son Edward VI. When Wyatt returned to England he took no part in public affairs.

1545 Was in London with Surrey and a band of boon companions and went roistering noisily along narrow, dark, stinking unlit streets of the city, breaking expensive precious glass windows of citizens houses and damaging ecclesiastical glass windows. They were brought to trial before the dreaded Privy Council, charging with acts of violence and in addition to "eating meat in Lent". There seems little doubt that they were not altogether sober when the offences were committed. It was known that they were in the habit of frequenting a "house" kept by Mistress Arundel, and she came to their aid at the trial. The three young men were sent to prison in the Poultry but was later removed to the Tower. When released he volunteered to join the English contingent fighting in alliance with Charles V of Spain in Flanders. It was there that he came to dislike the Spaniards. He was a most successful soldier, showing courage, initiative and ability to command. He was wounded on one occasion; was given command of 1000 footmen; and later made Commander of the fortress of Boulogne; serving seven years abroad. Earlier he took part in the earlier uprising by the Duke of Northumberland, to put Lady Jane Grey on the throne. After his war service he retired to Allington as a country gentleman.

1553 He received an invitation from Edward Courtenay, Earl of Devon to a secret meeting in London, following rumours that Mary intended to marry Philip of Spain.

1554 On Queen Mary's (an RC) intention to marry Philip of Spain though this would bring England under Roman Catholic and Spanish influence. Invited friends to Allington Castle, got their support, raised 4000 men in Maidstone, and marched on London in a rebellion in favour of placing Lady Jane Grey, a Protestant and descendent of Henry VIII, on the throne. Arrived at Blackheath end of January and entered London a week later. Opposition then organised, his supporters faded away, Wyatt taken to the Tower as a traitor. Attained, beheaded 11 April 1554 age 33. Lady Jane Grey beheaded the day before.

Jane Haute and Thomas 'The Younger' Wyatt had the following children:

1152. i. George 'Sir' Wyatt was born in 1550. He died in 1623. He married Jane Finch in 1568.
- ii. Anna Wyatt.
- iii. Jane Wyatt.

2306. Thomas 'Sir' Finch. He married Katherine Moyle.

2307. Katherine Moyle.

Katherine Moyle and Thomas 'Sir' Finch had the following child:

1153. i. Jane Finch. She married George 'Sir' Wyatt in 1568. He was born in 1550. He died in 1623.

Generation 13

4608. Thomas 'The Poet' Wyatt, son of Henry 'The Earl of Norfolk' Wyatt and Ann Skinner, was born in 1503 in Allington Castle, England. He died on 11 Oct 1542 in Sherbone, England. He married Elizabeth Brooke.

4609. Elizabeth Brooke, daughter of Thomas Brooke and Dorothy Heydon, was born in 1503.

Notes for Thomas 'The Poet' Wyatt:

1503 Born at Allington Castle. Playmate and friend of Anne Boleyn. At her coronation acted for his father as Chief Ewerer, pouring scented water over her hands. Had an early love affair with Ann Boleyn, but had to make way for Henry VIII. When Anne Boleyn was sent to the scaffold in 1536, Thomas Wyatt was also sent there in case he might be wanted as a witness at her trial; released a month later. Accompanied Thomas Cromwell to the scaffold as they were great friends.

1515. Matriculated at St Johns College, Cambridge when only 12, graduated B.A. 3 years later.

1516. Received his first Court appointment, Sewer extraordinary to the Royal Household of Henry VIII.

1520. Married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Brook, (Lord Cobham). Marriage arranged by parents and was unhappy. Separated soon after birth of a son, Thomas, the younger. Presumed that Thomas (the elder) still retained affection for Anne Boleyn. Seventeen years after his marriage, the then Lord Cobham, (Elizabeth's brother) wrote complaining that Thomas Wyatt still refused to make any financial provision for his wife. He was highly intelligent, witty, fearless of speech to the point of indiscretion, impulsive and unsteady, spoilt by an admiring father and friends.

1521. Made Esquire of the Body (Kings personal Bodyguard)

1524. Appointed Clerk of the Jewel Office, (senior post relinquished by his father in favour of Thomas Cromwell) When Wyatt embarked on his diplomatic career he was a young man of 23. He died when he was 40.

1526. Formed part of a mission under Sir Thomas Cheney, to the Flemish Court.

1527. Attached to staff of the Ambassador (Earl of Bedford) to the French Court. Visited Rome, Venice, Ferrara, Bologna, Florence and studied Italian literature. This influenced his writing of English and he became the 'pioneer of the English sonnet' 1529 - 30. High Marshall of Calais.

1536. Commanded troops to suppress Catholic revolt in Lincolnshire, known as the 'Pilgrimage of Grace'

1537. Appointed by the King to be the Sheriff of Kent. Was embarrassed financially, in spite of inheriting father's large fortune, due to his own extravagant expenditure. Was sent as Ambassador to various European courts to help Henry VIII's causes.

1540. After execution of Cromwell, (Thomas' friend), the opposing faction renewed attacks on Thomas Wyatt: he was charged with disrespectful references to the King when ambassador to Spain; with relations with the "traitor Cardinal De La Pole"; with living a wild and extravagant life.

1541. Arrested, taken bound and manacled to the Tower. Very unusual for a man of his position. Allington Castle seized, together with his plate, armour and horses and other valuables. saved from execution by intervention and interest of Catherine Howard, Henry's new Queen, whose mother was a Culpeper, friend and neighbour of Wyatt's of Kent; on the condition that 1. he confessed his guilt. 2. he took back his wife Elizabeth. Catherine and Culpeper (her lover) were both executed in 1542.

1542. Restored to favour. Appointed Knight of the Shire of Kent. High Steward of Maidstone. Sent to greet the Emperor's Ambassador at Falmouth but caught a chill on the way and died (in October) at Sherborne, buried in the Minster, aged just under 40. After 3 days illness he died and died of pneumonia and was buried in the great Church at Sherborne, exact whereabouts unknown, but it has been surmised that it was in the Horsey Tomb as he died in the house of his great friend Sir John Horsey, whom he had known through having extensive estates in Dorset and Somerset. A brilliant proud, impetuous man, who made enemies as easily as he made friends.

11. Sir Thomas Wyatt. 1503 - 1542 (the elder)

'Kept a lions whelp and an Irish greyhound at the castle, and made playmates of them --- at last the lions whelp grew in courage and became dangerous. It flew at its young master and must inevitably have destroyed him, but for the greyhound, who leapt on its back, pulled him down: when Wyatt coolly drew his rapier and slew the whelp.

The story being repeated to Henry VIII he observed --- 'Oh, he can tame lions' ----' Besides his love songs, almost the earliest in the language, he produced a metrical version of the psalms of David and deserved a distinguished position among the fathers of English poetry. He resided much at Allington Castle, where he wrote much of his poetry and which he repaired 'with the most beautiful buildings' 'This makes me at home to hunt and hawk; And in foul weather at my book to sit; In frost and snow then with my bow to stalk; No man doth mark wherso I ride or go In lusty leas at liberty I walk And of these mews I feel nor weal nor woe' Roger Ascham declares that 'he was one of the best translators of the Latin poets of the age in which he lived'. His fame rests chiefly on his poetry and diplomacy; his early friendship with the accomplished Earl of Surrey, doubtless helping him to stimulate his poetic tastes and give him a status in the literary world. Henry's court was a sophisticated centre of music, literature and learning. By far the best poet was Wyatt, with the Earl of Surrey, both of whom had travelled in Italy and there heard the stately measures of Dante, Aristotle and Petrarch.

They had greatly polished the rude and homely manner of their vulgar poesie' INSCRIPTION ON THE TOMB OF SIR JOHN HORSEY, SHERBORNE ABBEY, DORSET 'In memory of SIR THOMAS WYATT, poet and statesman, who died at Clifton, Maybank, the house of a friend, Sir John Horsey, 11 Oct 1542, and is buried in the vault of this chapel. 'Wiat resteth here; that quick would never rest.'

From Henry VIII by John Bowle. Anne Boleyn was appointed at about the age of 22 as Lady-in-waiting to the Queen, Catherine of Aragon. At Court Anne had a flirtation with Sir Thomas Wyatt, but realised Henry VIII's intentions she broke it off. Sir Thomas wrote her a sonnet complaining of the broken affair. Later, after Anne became Queen, Cromwell became estranged from his Boleyn patrons who were hindering an understanding with Charles V, and decided she must go. He had her spied upon and a secret commission was set up. She was suddenly accused of treason, adultery and incest. The indictment - or frame up - alleged, with dates, that over the past three years she has procured five men to "violate her". The accused included her brother George Rochford; Sir Francis Weston, of the King's privy Chamber; and Mark Smeaton, a musician; Sir Henry Norris, Squire of Kings Bodyguard; William Brereton, of Cheshire. Though all denied the charges they were found guilty and executed, much of the evidence being secured under torture. The King, always suspicious, also had Sir Thomas Wyatt arrested. He was bound and fettered and marched to the Tower, by Archers of the King's Bodyguard, "No one dare say a word for him". When arrested Wyatt replied "the King well knows what I told him before he was married". He was later released at the request of Queen Catherine "on condition that he take back his wife from whom he had been separated fifteen years" but only to die at Sherborne the following year returning from Falmouth, where he had met envoys from the Emperor. As a boy, Wyatt made the acquaintance of Anne Boleyn, and long after the date of his marriage was regarded as her lover.

His relations with her continued close until her favours were sought by Henry VIII, then it is said that he frankly confessed to Henry the character of his intimacy with Anne and warned Henry against marrying a woman of blemished character. These arms appear in the background of a reproduction of a portrait of Sir Thomas Wyatt, (the elder) by Holbein in the National Portrait Gallery. As the reproduction is in black and white the tinctures do not show. In 1541 Bishop Bonner of London, jealous of Wyatt and anxious to take his place as Ambassador accused Wyatt of Lutheran sympathies, and Wyatt was arrested and sent to the Tower. After a short while and apparently no formal trial he was released by intervention of Catherine Howard, whose mother was a Culpeper and neighbour of Wyatt in Kent. '

On March 19th when Queen Catherine sailed up the Thames to Greenwich with the King and Civic dignitaries she took occasion and courage to entreat the King for release of Master Wyatt, which petition the King granted though on rather hard terms, the first of them being that the said Wyatt should confess his guilt for which he had been arrested; and secondly that he was to resume conjugal relations with his wife from whom he had been separated for upwards of fifteen years. Wyatt had cast her away on account of adultery, and had not seen her for many years; he will now be obliged to receive her, and should he not do so, and not lead a conjugal life with her, or should he be found to keep up adulterous relations with one or two other ladies that he has since lived with, he is to suffer pain of death and confiscation of property"

On March 27th Wyatt was again with the King at Dover and by April 10th was employed again being made captain of 300 light cavalry who were to protect Calais until the new fortifications were built, and there were soon proofs of the Kings' complete trust in him. At this time Wyatt was described by Marillac, (the Spanish Ambassador) 'as one of the richest gentleman in England, having an income from his patrimony of six to seven thousand ducats a year.' Leland described him as "tall in stature, with powerful muscles and sinews. His abundant hair was golden in youth, which he lost by degrees, and became bald, but there grew up instead a thick growth of his long beard." He wrote 250 poems in additions to the Penitential Psalms, and is considered the best poet between Chaucer and Spenser. Married Elizabeth Brooks 1520 daughter of Thomas, Lord Cobham. His son Thomas, (the younger) born 1521, and a daughter Ann before they were separated, the assumed cause of which was the unfaithfulness of his wife.

In 1534 Wyatt was involved in an affray with the sergeant of London one of whom killed. Wyatt was imprisoned in Fleet prison but released after one month. It is assumed that Elizabeth Darrell was his mistress when she was a member of the Exeter household, and who was afterwards alleged a traitor. In 1540 Following the execution of Cromwell, Wyatt retired to Allington; Elizabeth Darrell, Lady Poynings, Wyatt's son and daughter-in-law; were also there. Later he was arrested as a friend of Cromwell and concerned in his treason, on the instigation of Wyatt's rival Bishop Bonner of London. 1541 June 12th, Wyatt made his will bequeathing land in Dorset and Somerset to Elizabeth Darrell. Presumed he was buried in the Horsey Tomb 1543.

He was highly intelligent, witty, fearless of speech to the point of indiscretion, impulsive and unsteady, spoilt by an admiring father and friends.

1521. Made Esquire of the Body (Kings personal Bodyguard)

1524. Appointed Clerk of the Jewel Office, (senior post relinquished by his father in favour of Thomas Cromwell) When Wyatt embarked on his diplomatic career he was a young man of 23. He died when he was 40. 1526. Formed part of a mission under Sir Thomas Cheney, to the Flemish Court.

1527. Attached to staff of the Ambassador (Earl of Bedford) to the French Court. Visited Rome, Venice, Ferrara, Bologna, Florence and studied Italian literature. This influenced his writing of English and he became the 'pioneer of the English sonnet'

1529 - 30. High Marshall of Calais.

1536. Commanded troops to suppress Catholic revolt in Lincolnshire, known as the 'Pilgrimage of Grace'

1537. Appointed by the King to be the Sheriff of Kent.

Was embarrassed financially, in spite of inheriting father's large fortune, due to his own extravagant expenditure. Was sent as Ambassador to various European courts to help Henry VIII's causes. 1540. After execution of Cromwell, (Thomas' friend), the opposing faction renewed attacks on Thomas Wyatt: he was charged with disrespectful references to the King when ambassador to Spain; with relations with the "traitor Cardinal De La Pole"; with living a wild and extravagant life.

1541. Arrested, taken bound and manacled to the Tower. Very unusual for a man of his position. Allington Castle seized, together with his plate, armour and horses and other valuables. saved from execution by intervention and interest of Catherine Howard, Henry's new Queen, whose mother was a Culpeper, friend and neighbour of Wyatt's of Kent; on the condition that 1. he confessed his guilt. 2. he took back his wife Elizabeth. Catherine and Culpeper (her lover) were both executed in 1542.

1542. Restored to favour. Appointed Knight of the Shire of Kent. High Steward of Maidstone. Sent to greet the Emperor's Ambassador at Falmouth but caught a chill on the way and died (in October) at Sherborne, buried in the Minster, aged just under 40. After 3 days illness he died of pneumonia and was buried in the great Church at Sherborne, exact whereabouts unknown, but it has been surmised that it was in the Horsey Tomb as he died in the house of his great friend Sir John Horsey, whom he had known through having extensive estates in Dorset and Somerset. A brilliant proud, impetuous man, who made enemies as easily as he made friends.

11. Sir Thomas Wyatt. 1503 - 1542 (the elder)

'Kept a lions whelp and an Irish greyhound at the castle, and made playmates of them --- at last the lions whelp grew in courage and became dangerous. It flew at its young master and must inevitably have destroyed him, but for the greyhound, who leapt on its back, pulled him down: when Wyatt coolly drew his rapier and slew the whelp. The story being repeated to Henry VIII he observed --- 'Oh, he can tame lions' ----'

Besides his love songs, almost the earliest in the language, he produced a metrical version of the psalms of David and deserved a distinguished position among the fathers of English poetry. He resided much at Allington Castle, where he wrote much of his poetry and which he repaired 'with the most beautiful buildings'

'This makes me at home to hunt and hawk; And in foul weather at my book to sit; In frost and snow then with my bow to stalk; No man doth mark whereso I ride or go In lusty leas at liberty I walk And of these mews I feel nor weal nor woe'

Roger Ascham declares that 'he was one of the best translators of the Latin poets of the age in which he lived'. his fame rests chiefly on his poetry and diplomacy; his early friendship with the accomplished Earl of Surrey, doubtless helping him to stimulate his poetic tastes and give him a status in the literary world.

Henry's court was a sophisticated centre of music, literature and learning. By far the best poet was Wyatt, with the Earl of Surrey, both of whom had travelled in Italy and there heard the stately measures of Dante, Aristo and Petrarch. They had greatly polished the rude and homely manner of their vulgar poesie'

INSCRIPTION ON THE TOMB OF SIR JOHN HORSEY, SHERBORNE ABBEY, DORSET

'In memory of SIR THOMAS WIATT, poet and statesman, who died at Clifton, Maybank, the house of a friend, Sir John Horsey, 11 Oct 1542, and is buried in the vault of this chapel. 'Wiat resteth here; that quick would never rest.'

From Henry VIII by John Bowle.

Anne Boleyn was appointed at about the age of 22 as Lady-in-waiting to the Queen, Catherine of Aragon. At Court Anne had a flirtation with Sir Thomas Wyatt, but realised Henry VIII's intentions she broke it off. Sir Thomas wrote her a sonnet complaining of the broken affair.

Later, after Anne became Queen, Cromwell became estranged from his Boleyn patrons who were hindering an understanding with Charles V, and decided she must go. He had her spied upon and a secret commission was set up. She was suddenly accused of treason, adultery and incest. The indictment - or frame up - alleged, with dates, that over the past three years she has procured five men to "violate her". The accused included her brother George Rochford; Sir Francis Weston, of the King's privy Chamber; and Mark Smeaton, a musician; Sir Henry Norris, Squire of Kings Bodyguard; William Brereton, of Cheshire. Though all denied the charges they were found guilty and executed, much of the evidence being secured under torture. The King, always suspicious, also had Sir Thomas Wyatt arrested. He was bound and fettered and marched to the Tower, by Archers of the King's Bodyguard, "No one dare say a word for him". When arrested Wyatt replied "the King well knows what I told him before he was married". He was later released at the request of Queen Catherine "on condition that he take back his wife from whom he had been separated fifteen years" but only to die at Sherborne the following year returning from Falmouth, where he had met envoys from the Emperor.

As a boy, Wyatt made the acquaintance of Anne Boleyn, and long after the date of his marriage was regarded as her lover. His relations with her continued close until her favours were sought by Henry VIII, then it is said that he frankly confessed to Henry the character of his intimacy with Anne and warned Henry against marrying a woman of blemished character.

These arms appear in the background of a reproduction of a portrait of Sir Thomas Wyatt, (the elder) by Holbein in the National Portrait Gallery. As the reproduction is in black and white the tinctures do not show.

In 1541 Bishop Bonner of London, jealous of Wyatt and anxious to take his place as Ambassador accused Wyatt of Lutheran sympathies, and Wyatt was arrested and sent to the Tower. After a short while and apparently no formal trial he was released by intervention of Catherine Howard, whose mother was a Culpeper and neighbour of Wyatt in Kent.

' On March 19th when Queen Catherine sailed up the Thames to Greenwich with the King and Civic dignitaries she took occasion and courage to entreat the King for release of Master Wyatt, which petition the King granted though on rather hard terms, the first of them being that the said Wyatt should confess his guilt for which he had been arrested; and secondly that he was to resume conjugal relations with his wife from whom he had been separated for upwards of fifteen years. Wyatt had cast her away on account of adultery, and had not seen her for many years; he will now be obliged to receive her, and should he not do so, and not lead a conjugal life with her, or should he be found to keep up adulterous relations with one or two other ladies that he has since lived with, he is to suffer pain of death and confiscation of property" On March 27th Wyatt was again with the King at Dover and by April 10th was employed again being made captain of 300 light cavalry who were to protect Calais until the new fortifications were built, and there were soon proofs of the Kings' complete trust in him.

At this time Wyatt was described by Marillac, (the Spanish Ambassador) 'as one of the richest gentleman in England, having an income from his patrimony of six to seven thousand ducats a year.'

Leland described him as "tall in stature, with powerful muscles and sinews. His abundant hair was golden in youth, which he lost by degrees, and became bald, but there grew up instead a thick growth of his long beard."

He wrote 250 poems in additions to the Penitential Psalms, and is considered the best poet between Chaucer and Spencer.

Married Elizabeth Brooks 1520 daughter of Thomas, Lord Cobham. His son Thomas, (the younger) born 1521, and a daughter Ann before they were separated, the assumed cause of which was the unfaithfulness of his wife.

In 1534 Wyatt was involved in an affray with the sergeant of London one of whom killed. Wyatt was imprisoned in Fleet prison but released after one month. It is assumed that Elizabeth Darrell was his mistress when she was a member of the Exeter household, and who was afterwards alleged a traitor.

In 1540 Following the execution of Cromwell, Wyatt retired to Allington; Elizabeth Darrell, Lady Poynings, Wyatt's son and daughter-in-law; were also there. Later he was arrested as a friend of Cromwell and concerned in his treason, on the instigation of Wyatt's rival Bishop Bonner of London.

1541 June 12th, Wyatt made his will bequeathing land in Dorset and Somerset to Elizabeth Darrell. Presumed he was buried in the Horsey Tomb 1543.
